Our team researched three children of James Alford Williams, who was lynched in 1921 in Warren County, North Carolina. We were specifically researching Wash, Mary, and Indie B. Williams, the children of James and his wife, Tempie Perry. This presentation is a layout of the successes and failures we had while researching Wash, Mary, and Indie B Williams and their descendants. While researching, we found avenues that led us to even more pathways to research but some led to dead-ends. We want to provide an overview of our successes and failures and think about things we (and future researchers) could improve on in the future. Towards the end of our research, we discovered resources that would have been helpful to have earlier.
